Relocating Process

Can someone explain to me like you're explaining to Oscar Sudi the process of relocating, so I'm 26 years old, Male, a graduate of economics and finance a 2:1 equivalent for those who understand, and I'm very much interested in trying a new country particularly English-speaking country either UK,...

Community Insight: While some community members advise that Be careful as you embark on this journey especially with agents that will 100% wash you. Getting full rides to Aussie seems difficult at least I don't know many people that have. Typically, the best way to get full rides is doing niche programs or pursuing a PhD but even then, it's hard and you have to be a very promising candidate with a great background (published, research, etc). If I were to pick a country to immigrate to right now, I would pick Aussie just because it is immigrant friendly and as a student you're actually able to work. That said, any country to plan to immigrate you will require an upfront insignificant cost in the millions of kshs. My advice is to go anywhere where you have gotten a scholarship but do not expect it to be downhill. If it were easy, Zaks would be alone in 254., others highlight that Would you also try Europe? There's still some Schools that teach in English and have scholarships as well. I got accepted into MCI in Austria - it's a private school and the fees is like 6M but I got a tuition scholarship so I only have to pay for my living expenses only. They have courses in finance and business if you'd be interested for next years intake check it out.

Student Visas & Pathways

BANK STATEMENT PROOF

Watu wa majuu niko na swali, especially for those who got an opportunity to travel to United States through a student visa. So a couple months ago i applied for a masters programme in this university (Southern Illinois University Edwardsville) and was approved for admission.

Community Insight: The consensus among top contributors is to An immediate relative can sponsor you (in my case it was uncle) with bank balance and income showing he has an income that sustains that balance, a letter from him too just in case. It's mostly based on the interviewer's assessment of you and your plans to return and why you should study there and not Kenya(eg a niche course not offered here(The main thing is, it will be very very expensive to study there(foreigner fees, little to no sponsorships) and more difficult to remain and work so as to justify the end cost. Calculate the future cost vs being home and turning that six figure tuition money in a business for yourself whereas others suggest Did you check to see if they offer undergraduate assistant jobs in your department. This will help pay your fees and lower the bank statement balance needed. and Look for a relative who is rich or someone with a business to give you a bank statement.

F1 visa in administrative process for over 6 months!!!

Hi guys so last year October niliapply for a us student visa nikapewa approval. After a week my passport was returned with a yellow slip (221g) nikaambiwa nifill form inaitwa ds-5535.

Community Insight: The consensus among top contributors is to This is a tough spot to be in, and honestly, losing a scholarship while stuck in a bureaucratic black hole is enough to mess with anyone's mental health. When you get that yellow slip (221g), it means your visa is "refused" pending Administrative Processing. The DS-5535 is "extreme vetting"—the embassy is waiting for agencies in Washington D.C. (like the FBI or DHS) to clear your background, travel history, and social media. It has nothing to do with your academic merit; you're just caught in a security net. Next Steps to Consider: 1. Update your I-20: Since you lost your scholarship, you need to talk to your school's officials immediately. If the visa is eventually approved, you will need a valid I-20 with a deferred start date. You'll also need to prove you still have the funds to cover the costs since the scholarship is gone unless you can get a new one. 2. Congressional Inquiry: Reach out to the school's International Student Office and ask them to help you contact a US Senator or Representative in the state where the university is located. A "Congressional Lead" forces the embassy to give a status update beyond the standard canned email. The Bottom Line: Six months is the threshold where this delay becomes "unreasonable." Stop checking the status every day for your own sanity—it won't change until the background check clears. Hang in there mse. You did your part right; the system is just broken. 🍷 whereas others suggest You can be humbled properly with a US embassy, "approved" and then BOOM! "surprise" side mission "administrative processing" 🗡️ and Just be patient and wait for them to communicate. Keep looking for other scholarships and other things to do in the meantime.

Traps, Denials & Deportation

$100k Debt for a $60k Salary? The big lie about Degrees Majuu.

Mbogi, one thing nimenotice Yues ni tunachocha degrees sana, lakini msee wa trade (electrician, plumber, etc) anaclear $100k+ bila pressure. Meanwhile, unaspend $100k colle alafu unakulishwa salo ya $60k ofe.

Community Insight: The consensus among top contributors is to A few things: 1) The ceiling on earnings for white collar work is still significantly higher in alot of cases. My first entry level job i made 36k a year, now I earn 160k with potential to get to 300k if I pushed myself harder. But I just started a family and im on my last maternity leave so my priorities are work life balance vs pure $$ 2) A lot of trades people will tell you that they have an expiry date physically. There's only so long you can do those jobs and most have to retire in their 40a purely based on physical demands. 3)The corporate structure exists there too and many are now salaried similar to white collar jobs so not much of a difference. 4)Just like STEM before this, once people talk about an occupation, enough people join it and the extra supply leads to a salary drop. All this to say, there's no guaranteed way kuomoka, taduta yako and be wise about your choice. Ukifuata tu watu bila plan utakiona whereas others suggest I'll take 60k and have a working back and knees while I am in my 30's. Trade jobs will massacre you physically. and Somebody lied to you. The average Electrician in the US makes $62,350(<https://www.bls.gov/booh/construction-and-extraction/electricians.htm>). For a plumber it's $62,970(<https://www.bls.gov/booh/construction-and-extraction/plumbers-pipefitters-and-steamfitters.htm>). This is the average (not entry level) meaning people who are in the middle of their career with about 15-20 years experience. In 15-20 years that college grad can be a manager earning $200k+.

Kenya -US Health deal Update

After Zaks agreeing to give out our health data, Consumer Federation of Kenya(COFEK) ilikuwa at the fore front of the petition aganist hii story. Recently walikuwa kwa court wakitaka kuwithdraw the case juu "wameskizana na serikali".

Community Insight: The consensus among top contributors is to Big up to that judge. We are fixing this country whereas others suggest Shida ni, courts zinakataa but badi wanafanya chenye wanataka. The executive is not respecting the judiciary and it's a clear sign of a failed state and Judge basically said; "Kwani mimi sijaonwa kando mkisikizana?".

Serious question watu wa majuu, which country is the best to fully settle and build a career abroad?

Watu wa majuu, need your honest advice. I'm thinking of relocating abroad, not just visiting or doing short contracts, but fully settling and building a real career and life outside Kenya.

Community Insight: The consensus among top contributors is to Any country in Europe. Anything but America 🇺🇸. Max Canada. But Europeans have the best way of life compared to most countries so thats a good start. whereas others suggest I have a pal that settled in Netherlands and built her career there, she went as an au pair and now she's a nurse there. and The best country to build a career is any that you get a job in. If you get a job in many then we can compare dufferent countries based on your specific situation.

Community Insight: *The consensus among top contributors is to Pain points: Pet grooming, pet walking, pet taking to the vet. Solution: provide mobile grooming services, pick up and drop off to the vet service, pet walking... I used to do this for people after campus before I got a job, and a lot of my clients ended up being repeat clients. If I were to go it now, the solution I'd execute would be to step it up and create an app, where people sign up and upload their requests, automate scheduling and reminders, the app acts as your personal assistant so every day your work is cut out for you. DUBAI...

Hello for anyone in the tech field and is in Dubai, how's the job market there? I have a friend who has 5+ years in software development (java + python) and has been jobless for quite a while, almost a year and so we are thinking of countries where he could try his luck.

Community Insight: The consensus among top contributors is to Dubai still has a solid tech job market but it is competitive and not as easy as people think. Your friend with 5+ years in Java and Python is in a good position for mid to senior roles, especially in backend, cloud, or fintech, where demand is still strong and salaries can be quite high. The challenge is that Dubai attracts talent from all over the world, so competition is intense and many people stay jobless for months if they don't approach it strategically. The best move is not to just relocate blindly but to apply for jobs remotely first, tailor the CV to UAE standards, build a strong portfolio, and target companies actively hiring in those specific skill areas. whereas others suggest The only problem in dubai is racism that still exists People get jobs depending on your race Most tech jobs are for Arabs from gulf countries and Indians get the upper hand Philippines get hospitality and Africans get the labor work and Just my 2 cents. With the proliferation of AI, you really have to be a Python expert for it to open doors for you. Pretty the 1 language that Aln absolutely excels at. That said, with his accepting experience, he should start looking into DevOps roles.

Community Insight: The consensus among top contributors is to If you have ever been back home and witnessed the 'sherehe' Kenyans partake in, you quickly realise most of it is not for fun, it is a coping mechanism. It's masks a lot of mental health issues and childhood trauma that has not been addressed. That population, especially Nairobi, is ripe for a drug like meth or ecstasy. whereas others suggest I don't joke about addiction and mental health because I have experienced it firsthand in my family...drugs ni mbaya ...mihadarati inachizisha and This is very concerning 🙄.

Waremba Wa Majuu Na Hair Trends. Instagram Manenoz.

Nimekuwa niki-observe hii trend ya beauty abroad. Penguin huko Kanairo maintaining a good look ni affordable, lakini huku Majuu, the cost of quality hair is insane.

Community Insight: The consensus among top contributors is to Good looks ni currency. The more you invest, the more the perceived value. Some ladies have been able to infiltrate the exclusive circles of the rich by looksmaxxing. whereas others suggest Huku nje some of us do our own hair, you can see ladies doing tutorials online on how to make their hair. I used to see people in hair groups showing us "trust the process" videos, and you'd see comments like... why not go to the salon, but now I understand. Either the salon is too expensive or the hairdresser is too far, some even drive for 2 hours to a hairdresser and if you have younger kids, that's extra hours of babysitting pay. As for me and my simple life, I do cornrows wear a wig, i have a lot of wigs, for each look and event. and u/Mtoto_Mzuri hebu explain to us this madness!
